News in Brief.
Col. Sam. B. Jones, of the Memphis and Ohio railroad, has returned from a trip East.
The beer-jerkist, Lizzie Clark, has recovered from her attempted suicide, and is now to be seen in her accustomed walks.
The concert and fete at the New Memphis Theater to-night will be a very attractive affair, and will doubtless be numerously attended.
The vocal and instrumental concert tendered Miss E. M. Clemmons by her pupils will take place at the Assembly Hall on Friday evening, June 4th.
Mr. Louis Hanauer placed upon our table, this morning, a fine ripe tomato as a specimen of what he is raising at his place, near the city. This is the first we have seen, and early for such a spring as this has been.
The Dialectic Society, at Centre Hill, Miss., a literary organization, held their anniversary celebration a few days ago, which brought together a large crowd of the intelligent and refined people of that neighborhood. We are thankful to the managers for an invitation to attend, but regret that we could not be present. The elegant ladies of the vicinity had decorated the hall with wreaths of evergreen and rare flowers in exquisite taste. A fine band from the city was on hand, and the arrangements were all made and carried out in good order. Some fine speeches were made, we learn, and the exercises were succeeded in the evening by a dance, where beauty, grace and mirth reigned supreme through the short, joyous hours.
Base Ball.
The match game of base ball which came off on Wednesday last, between the Bluff City base ball club and a picked nine, resulted in the defeat of the former by a score of twenty-nine to forty. Below we append the score:

Judicial Election.
The election passed off quietly yesterday, owing, in a great degree, to the efficient police regulations, and no disturbance took place whatever. The Radicals being divided in the election of Chancellor, worked with desperation, and we are sorry to confess that the Democratic party failed to concentrate on their own candidate and elect him. Many went off with the Hunter wing, saying there was "no chance" to elect Caruthers, and they wanted to see Barbour Lewis and the Smith party defeated. Such men ought to be ashamed to hold up their heads before an outraged community, and deserve to be disfranchised forever and placed under an empire, where one man thinks for all.
Repeated reverses have demoralized the party, and many have voted against their convictions for the sake of being on the winning side. In the hour of weakness and doubt they desert the party like rats leaving a sinking ship, but should a day of victory and power ever come for our cause, these weak-kneed Democrats who vote the Radical ticket will be the first to take front seats and the most blatant in boasting of what "we have done." We hope that all such will be marked well, and when different results are achieved, they will be forced to remain in the company they have selected. The returns received thus far are as follows:

The additional returns received today, up to one o'clock, were from Big Creek and White's station. The Big Creek district gave Hunter 27, Caruthers 2, and Smith 1. The returns from White's station are not large, and will probably be thrown out, owing to some informality. Judge Hunter has discovered that extensive frauds have been perpetrated. He is, doubtless, well posted on the subject, having been engaged night and day for some weeks in tampering with country negroes and peddling out tickets. If any man has a right to speak out against frauds it is "stop thief" Hunter. He has been beaten, doubtless, by his own game, and feels over it.
The election of yesterday shows the election of three of our candidates. In the case of Fouts and Ryan the returns, as made, show handsome majorities. In the case of Wallace one fact conceded to be true, both actually and in point of law, shows a majority in his favor of not less than four hundred. It is not denied that no person is entitled to vote for Judge of the Criminal Court unless he lives within the territorial jurisdiction of the Court, comprised within the 5th, 13th and 14th Civil Districts of this county. The colored votes at the Ninth and First Wards alone show that of the nine hundred and fifty votes five hundred were cast by persons residing not within the jurisdiction of the Court; all of which were cast for Major Hudson, and were counted in the aggregate returns as made. These ballots, of course, will be subtracted from the aggregate vote of Major Hudson, which will give Wallace the majority as above stated.
This result is gratifying, for even the political opponents of Mr. Wallace concede to him great energy and large experience, and an intimate knowledge of the present condition of the Criminal Court dockets, now crowded with hundreds of prisoners, ready entailing upon us over one hundred thousand dollars per annum, without giving to this community any compensating relief by the prompt punishment of the innumerable violations of our laws.
As an evidence of Mr. Wallace's capacity, we have been informed by one familiar with the affairs of the Court, that at one term alone there were convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary of this State prisoners whose aggregate periods of confinement and labor amounted to two hundred and eighty years. Let us, therefore, look to the reorganization of the Criminal Court with a confident belief of great retrenchment, and a prompt and vigorous administration of the laws of the State.
Messrs. Ryan and Fouts are gentlemen who command the confidence of the public and the respect of the bar. They will make efficient, impartial administrators of justice.
The Rev. Dr. Green, of Nashville, will preach Sunday, the 30th instant, in the morning, at the Second street Methodist church, and in the evening at Hernandez street. Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, Dr. Green will speak to a mass meeting of the children of the city, at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, Court street. All Sunday schools are cordially invited.

MARRIAGE IN DEATH.
A Dying Man Married to His Paramour—The Bride of a Corpse.
The shooting affray at the Parlor Music Hall, on Jefferson street, night before last, resulted most tragically. The wound received by Mona. Veaudemont, the maitre de ballet, at first supposed to be slight, proved to be fatal. After being wounded he was conveyed to his lodgings on Main street, near Washington, where he was attended by Dr. Lynch. Early yesterday he showed symptoms of sinking, and in the afternoon the doctor informed him that he could not live. He had suffered intensely, but met his fate with great courage. He sent for Father Kelly and received the consolations of the Catholic Church. He said he could die bravely, but it grieved his heart to leave his companion of the can-can, Mademoiselle Aline Le-Favre, whom he had hoped one day to see great and rich in the world. In his last moments he expressed a desire to be married to her, that she might inherit certain property which would one day fall to him in France. A license was procured as quick as possible. His real name was given as Arthur De Pelgrae; here as Maggie Cox. They were married at three o'clock by Father Kelly. Only two persons were present, Mr. Henry Drennan and Miss Catharine Sharpe, both strangers to the bridegroom and bride. The bride was disconsolate, and gave way to the most fearful grief. Twenty minutes after the marriage ceremony Veaudemont was dead. His last words to his wife were: "If you ever marry in the future, be sure to marry an honest man, whether he be rich or poor." The deceased was a native of Belgium, and has been in this country some nine years. He stated before his death that his family connections were highly respectable, and that he was thirty-one years old. He met the danseuse Aline Le-Favre a few years ago, and they have been living together ever since. They have been in Memphis several months, and have made a great sensation by bringing out the can-can, an extravaganza of French manners and morals. Veaudemont's mother and sister have just arrived in Chicago from France, and telegraphed for him after he was shot. A dispatch was returned as follows: "Shot last night; died about an hour ago." The deceased had received an offer in St. Louis, and would probably have gone there in a few days. He was a man of fine education and polished manners, and claimed to be of high blood. His career began on the stage of the Imperial Academy in Paris. He possessed a fine order of dramatic talent, but gave as a reason for his course that he could make more money by the can-can than in the higher walks of his profession. Two years ago he was here under his real name as a fencing master. Maggie Cox is a native of Belfast, Ireland, and claims to be of good family. It is said that she will now retire from the stage to take possession of her husband's property in France, which is represented to be considerable.
The murderer, Johnson, has not been found, though he is thought to be hid away in the city.
THE LOST KEY; OR, "NOT AT HOME."
A Story for Sweet Sixteens.
A beautiful young lady in Memphis, who has just appeared in society, and begun to exercise the prerogative of entertaining company in the parlor without prompting from her mother, was greatly annoyed last Sunday by a little incident, which we will relate for the benefit of all young misses who contemplate an early debut in "society," whatever that may mean.
Miss Lucie, for that isn't her name, has the usual number of parents, namely, a father and a mother, and a sharp brother, about three years younger than herself, who thinks it very funny for "sis" to be visited by grown men with beards on their faces. Last Sunday he accompanied her to church, and after that they stopped and took dinner at their uncle Ben's house. In the cool of the evening they returned to their home, a quiet place in the suburbs, and found the doors locked. Their parents had taken the younger chips of the family and gone out riding. Being rather tired, they were anxious to get into the house, especially after finding that it was locked. The windows were all fastened from the inside, except one on the back porch, which the hopeful young brother raised, and they both crawled into the sitting-room, from which it was no trouble to reach all parts of the house, but the front door could not be opened.
Just as they began to feel comfortable and Tommy proposed to charge the pantry, they were startled by a loud ring from the door bell. Tommy sprang out at the back window in a twinkling and answered the ring in person by going around the chimney. The servants, it is hardly necessary to state, had rigged themselves up several hours before, according to the latest fashion plates, and gone out to illustrate the prevailing Broadway styles.
Two young gentlemen, with high, slender-brimmed silk hats, red kid gloves, slender canes, short coats and no pants to speak of, hair parted in the middle, and other adornments to match, were at the door. On Master Tommy's appearance, they both in a breath uttered: "How d'ye do? Is Miss Lucie at home?" Tommy was well enough posted to know that the last question was the one all important, so he answered that one alone: "N-no-no, sir; she's not at home just now—gone out riding—and will be at home pretty soon; won't you walk in and stay until she returns?" The little scamp knew he could not let them into the house, except through the window, to save his life, but he calculated upon their refusal, which was correct. They bowed to him with as much form as if he had been a grown man of consequence, and retreated in good order to their buggy and soon disappeared. Tommy reported to headquarters as soon as possible the way he had managed affairs, which was entirely satisfactory, though Miss Lucie was very sorry that she could not get to see those nice young men.

The house seemed so lonesome after this that the young couple concluded to take a walk. Imagine the blushes and confusion of Miss "Loozie" on emerging from the front gate to discover the two nice young men a few rods off, returning from a short turn down the avenue. There was no dodging them, and they passed on with a polite, freezing bow, firmly believing that Miss Lucie had intentionally been "not at home." She was greatly mortified by the occurrence, but there was no help for it, and it was no easy matter to send an explanation.
This is a picture from the original in our possession; and the two young men in red kids, if they have the kids yet, will readily recognize it.
Moral.—Don't climb in at the window, unless you intend to stay there.

VARIETIES THEATER.—Miss Blanche Morrison, the vocalist, has made a very pleasing impression so far, and is destined to become a favorite. Miss Gertrude Brooks is a character actress of youth, beauty and charming manners. The can-can continues to be a triumphant success, with Mrs. Hannah Birch in the leading role. The old favorites are all at their places, and an attractive programme is presented nightly, with full houses.

Many persons are in the habit of sleeping for half an hour or an hour immediately after dinner. This is a bad practice. Ten minutes sleep before dinner is worth more than an hour after. It rests and refreshes, and prepares the system for vigorous digestion. If sleep is taken after dinner it should be in the sitting posture, as the horizontal position is unfavorable to healthful digestion. Let those who need rest and sleep during the day take it before dinner instead of after, and they will soon find that they feel better, and that their digestion will be improved thereby. —Herald of Health.
